The Earle C. Clements Job Corps Academy at Morganfield has been ordered to stop accepting new students until June and halve the current number of student slots, a move that U.S. Rep. Ed Whitfield fears could well become permanent.

"We're talking about a $30 million economic impact on Morganfield, with a return of 1.9 dollars on every dollar spent," Whitfield said during an appearance at the center late Friday afternoon. "So we're talking about roughly a $60 million economic impact in this area."

As of Jan. 14, there were 1,103 students at the center, according to U.S. Department of Labor spokesman Jason Kuruvilla, and the center is authorized to train up to 1,300. It is slated to cut that number by 650 as the department tries to save money. Total enrollment cutbacks of 2,909 are planned, also including centers in Texas, Georgia, Utah, Massachusetts and Oklahoma.

Robbery suspect facing additional charges

A Henderson man charged with the Thursday robbery of Green River Federal Credit Union and seven other robberies since 2006 is now facing two more bank robbery charges.

On Friday, Kentucky State Police charged James Allen Morris, 53, 500 block of Gabe Street, with two counts of first-degree robbery in connection with the Aug. 11, 2006, and July 23, 2010, robberies at the Integra Bank Branch in Poole, according to a KSP news release.

The Henderson Police Department took Morris into custody soon after the 2 p.m. Thursday robbery at the credit union on Second Street in Henderson.

Jennifer Richmond, HPD public information officer, said a man, later identified as Morris, walked into the credit union and demanded money. He told employees that he had a gun, Richmond said, but didn't show a weapon.

After leaving with an unspecified amount of cash, Richmond said the man "ran down an alley west of the bank and got into a silver, four-door Pontiac G6."

Morris was located around 3:30 p.m. on Gabe Street and taken into custody.

In addition to Thursday's robbery at the credit union and the two robberies in Poole, HPD said Morris has been charged with the July robbery at the same credit union, the August robberies at Independence Bank and the Bank of Henderson, a 2011 holdup at the U.S. Bank, a 2007 robbery and a 2006 robbery at the U.S. Bank and a 2006 heist at Old National Bank.

Morris is lodged at the Henderson County Detention Center.

Signs of love

Many faculty and employees of South Heights Elementary School came out with positive and encouraging signs wishing motorists a happy day, encouraging them to smile and providing other positive messages. South Heights Principal Rob Carroll said they got the idea from a YouTube video and put their own spin on it. They're calling it "Honk if you want to change the world" and he said they're just wanting to make everyone feel good on their way home from a busy week at work.

Concept of gun insurance would appeal to some

The Associated Press

BOSTON — As lawmakers cast around for ways to curb gun-related violence, some are hoping the insurance market might offer incentives.

A bill filed Friday in Massachusetts would require gun owners to purchase liability insurance in the event that a firearm is used to injure.

The insurance policies would give those injured by a weapon a legal recourse, backers of the bill say, but they also would create financial incentives that could reduce accidents and fatalities. Gun owners, for example, might see lower insurance rates if they agreed to take firearms training courses and properly stored their weapons.

“Insurance companies were able to discourage smoking through the marketplace and make cars safer through the marketplace,” said state Rep. David Linsky, the bill’s sponsor.

And insurers have more leeway than law enforcement in some cases, he said.

Massachusetts already has gun storage laws, but police cannot come into a person’s home without a warrant, Linsky pointed out. An insurance company, however, would be able to verify that there is proper gun storage before writing a policy.

Officials at the National Conference of State Legislatures say to their knowledge no state has adopted a gun insurance requirement.

Obama backers pushing campaign on gun control

By Erica Werner

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Supporters of President Barack Obama’s gun-control proposals are planning a methodical, state-by-state campaign to try to persuade key lawmakers that it’s in their political interest to back his sweeping effort to crack down on firearms and ammunition sales and expand criminal background checks.

To succeed will require overturning two decades of conventional wisdom that gun control is bad politics.

The National Rifle Association is confident that argument won’t sell. But with polls showing majorities supporting new gun laws a month after the Connecticut shooting deaths of 20 schoolchildren and six adults, gun-control activists say the political calculus has changed. Their goal in coming weeks is to convince lawmakers of that, too, and to counter the NRA’s proven ability to mobilize voters against any proposals limiting access to guns.

The gun-control advocates are focused first on the Senate, which is expected to act before the House on Obama’s gun proposals. How Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., proceeds will depend in part on what he hears from a handful of Democrats in more conservative states where voters favor gun rights. These include some who are eyeing re-election fight in 2014, such as Mark Pryor of Arkansas, Mark Begich of Alaska and Max Baucus of Montana.

“We need to tell our members of Congress that they’ve got to stand up for sensible gun laws, and if they do that, we will stand up for them, and if they don’t we will stand up for whoever runs against them,” New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg told the U.S. Conference of Mayors Friday. “Because that’s exactly what the NRA is trying to do.”

Bloomberg’s group, Mayors Against Illegal Guns, is among a coalition of some 50 labor unions, advocacy groups and others that have been meeting since before Christmas to plot strategy, in loose coordination with the White House, according to people involved.

Just hours after Obama rolled out his gun proposals on Wednesday, the group gathered at the headquarters of the National Education Association to game out their plans. As of Friday, voters’ calls to Reid’s office were running two-to-one against Obama’s proposals, a Reid aide said.

Never far from such Democrats’ minds is what happened in 1994, when the party suffered widespread election losses after backing President Bill Clinton’s crime bill featuring a ban on assault weapons. Clinton and others credited the NRA’s campaigning with a big role in those Democrats’ defeats. And when the assault weapons ban came up for congressional renewal in 2004, it failed.

The goal of gun-control supporters will be to convince Democrats like Pryor, Begich and Baucus through phone calls, appearances at town hall meetings, print and TV ads and other means that voters in their state will support them if they back Obama’s plans.

One group involved, the Coalition to Stop Gun Violence, ran print ads in North Dakota newspapers criticizing newly elected Democratic Sen. Heidi Heitkamp after she expressed doubts about Obama’s proposals.

Activists have also identified a few Senate Republicans they hope to sway, including Mark Kirk of Illinois and Susan Collins of Maine. In the House, they’re focused on 35 to 40 Republicans in suburban areas or districts carried by Obama, where voters might be more supportive of gun-control measures.

GOP gives Obama respite on debt crisis

By Andrew Taylor

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House Republican leaders Friday offered President Barack Obama a three-month reprieve to a looming, market-rattling debt crisis, backing off demands that any immediate extension of the government’s borrowing authority be accompanied by stiff spending cuts.

The retreat came with a caveat aimed at prodding Senate Democrats to pass a budget after almost four years of failing to do so: a threat to cut off the pay of lawmakers in either House or Senate if their chamber fails to pass a budget this year. House Republicans have passed budgets for two consecutive years.

The idea got a frosty reception from House Democrats but a more measured response from the White House and Democratic Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid.

Republicans hadn’t settled on full details, but the measure would give the government about three more months of borrowing authority beyond a deadline expected to hit as early as mid-February, No. 2 House Republican Eric Cantor of Virginia said Friday.

The legislation wouldn’t require immediate spending cuts as earlier promised by GOP leaders like Speaker John Boehner of Ohio. Instead, it’s aimed at forcing the Democratic-controlled Senate to join the House in debating the federal budget.

“We are going to pursue strategies that will obligate the Senate to finally join the House in confronting the government’s spending problem,” Boehner told GOP lawmakers at a retreat in Williamsburg, Va. “The principle is simple: ‘no budget, no pay.’”

But the move ran into opposition from House Democrats, including leader Nancy Pelosi of California, who called it a gimmick because it would set up another potential confrontation in just a few months. Votes from Democrats may be needed to help pass the measure if GOP conservatives opposed to any increase in the debt limit withhold their support.

“This proposal does not relieve the uncertainty faced by small businesses, the markets and the middle class,” said Pelosi spokesman Drew Hammill. “This is a gimmick unworthy of the challenges we face and the national debate we should be having. The message from the American people is clear: no games, no default.”

Corps plans to raise water level at Lake Cumberland

■ Early project completion good news for locals

By Bruce Schreiner
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE—Southern Kentucky marina operator J.D. Hamilton is hoping for better times now that the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers plans to raise the water level in Lake Cumberland this summer as a nearly $600 million dam repair project starts winding down.

But it will take several years to fully recover from the economic setbacks caused by the lowering of the recreational haven, said Hamilton, who filed for bankruptcy protection as his debts piled up and his income languished during the work on Wolf Creek Dam.

Businesses relying on the lake suffered through six summer seasons of below-normal water levels that hurt tourism.

“It’s the beginning of the recovery for us,” Hamilton said by phone Friday of the Corps’ plans to raise the lake’s water level by about 20 feet this summer. “It’ll be a game changer getting the water back and having this project over.”

The Corps said that a contractor installing a massive barrier wall — a crucial part of the $594 million repair project — has progressed faster than expected. Workers are on pace to finish the wall by early spring, well ahead of the prior expected completion date of December 2013.

As a result, the Corps said it expects to raise the lake’s water level for the coming summer boating and fishing season to a level of 700 to 705 feet above sea level. That’s still below the usual summer peak level of 723 feet before work to reinforce the nearly mile-long dam.

But it’s a marked improvement from the approximately 680-foot lake level since early 2007, when the Corps lowered the lake by 40 feet to ease pressure on the leaking dam.

Before raising the level, a safety team will review the new barrier wall to ensure it meets safety standards.

Williams gives staff raises prior to departure

■ Official: Pay increases unfair to rest of workers

The Associated Press

FRANKFORT — Before leaving his post as Senate President, David Williams approved pay raises of between 2 percent and 14 percent for eight staff members of the state Senate.

The Courier-Journal (<http://cjky.it/WnrE6u>) reports the special pay raises went to his chief of staff and deputy chief of staff, as well as two other members of his Republican leadership staff, and to four staff members of minority Senate Democrats.

The pay increases came during a budget year that provided no increases to rank-and-file workers.

Williams told the newspaper he approved the raises to keep good workers from taking other jobs and to make the workers’ pay “commensurate” to staff working for the state House.

“We were losing people because of money. ... I lost three major policy people within the last six months,” he said. “You can’t afford to lose too many senior people. I felt very strongly it was important to keep institutional knowledge there.”

He said the Senate — which has 38 members — still pays around $400,000 less than the House — which has 100 members — on leadership staff salaries.

Williams approved the raises before resigning on Nov. 2 to accept an appointment as a circuit judge for Clinton, Cumberland and Monroe counties.

Kentucky Association of State Employees President David Smith said he feels the raises were unfair to other state workers.

“I expect they deserve the raises, but all state workers are overdue for a raise,” Smith said. “What’s wrong about this is that he helped his own and did not use his influence when he had it to help all state workers.”

Current Senate President Robert Stivers, R-Manchester, said he didn’t know about the raises and so could not comment.

House Speaker Greg Stumbo declined to comment on the pay issue.

“If Judge Williams feels these people should be rewarded before he left, that was his prerogative,” Stumbo said. “We’ve kept staff consistent but have reduced it when the budget called for it. We have lived under the same cuts as the other branches of government and will continue to do so.”

Family homelessness becoming a crisis

In our fast-paced society and going unnoticed by the vast majority is a new trend of homelessness with ever increasing numbers. The family. Although this community issue has been among us for years, the nationwide family homeless crisis has reached nearly incomprehensible numbers: children, women and men.

Henderson County and the Tri-State as a whole is not immune to this dilemma, and in fact is a part of it. Family shelters and shelters for women and children are at capacity in our area with many shelters having waiting lists.

The duration each family must endure before an opening occurs varies from shelter to shelter. With each passing day the homeless family experiences fear of the unknown, feelings of inadequacy, hopelessness, confusion, etc.

This underscores the need for a family shelter here in Henderson, Kentucky. In my opinion and after discussions with others in the community, this is Henderson County's greatest need.

An endeavor of this nature would obviously require a government-funded facility which would include a staff of social workers, an administrator, counselor, security, kitchen and laundry personnel. Also, the facility would need to maintain a working relationship with both the legal and health care professions, with this all to facilitate the progress of the homeless family and the betterment of the community.

As a staff member of the Harbor House Christian Center I receive numerous calls from families requesting information about shelters, with many of these calls coming from women with children right here in Henderson County, who at many times are in a crisis situation and have absolutely no resolution for their circumstances. With no options available, I can only refer them to shelters that are already at capacity.

Henderson Chamber sets 2013 priorities

By Brad Schneider
Special to The Gleaner

The Public Policy Committee of the Henderson-Henderson County Chamber of Commerce, chaired by Curt Hamilton, has identified the following issues as legislative priorities for 2013:

FEDERAL INITIATIVES

1. The chamber applauds the states of Kentucky and Indiana for continuing to work diligently toward the completion of Interstate 69 in Western Kentucky and Southwestern Indiana.

The chamber strongly encourages Congress, the U.S. Department of Transportation, and the Federal Highway Administration to designate Interstate 69 as a Project of National and Regional Significance and to accelerate funding for a new Interstate 69 Ohio River bridge. The chamber further supports the efforts of C-LINK and Hoosier Voices for I-69 in advocating for the advancement of the studies necessary to get federal and state funds to swiftly build this vital new bridge.

The chamber will continue to work diligently with C-LINK, Hoosier Voices, the Chamber of Commerce of Southwest Indiana and state governmental agencies to encourage the utilization of alternative funding mechanisms such as tolling or to expedite this essential construction project.

2. The sustainability of coal-fired energy is vital to the continued economic growth of our area. The chamber believes adoption and enforcement of unreasonable regulations aimed at debilitating the coal-fired power industry poses a significant threat to northwest Kentucky's overall economy and must be opposed at every opportunity.

We support and encourage governmental industries to support the coal-fired power industry and to explore new technologies and different ways to use existing coal reserves to make cleaner, more environmentally friendly energy available and sustainable in the future.

3. The chamber backs the drafting of federal legislation that would require all firms that do retail business with Kentuckians — including out-of-state, web-based companies — to collect and remit to the state the Kentucky sales tax, just as bricks-and-mortar businesses located in the commonwealth are forced to do.

STATE INITIATIVES

1. The chamber cheers the General Assembly's efforts at tax reform and public employee benefits reform and hopes the ultimate goal is to make Kentucky's business climate among the most attractive in the U.S. and foster strong economic growth.

2. The chamber urges the Kentucky Energy and Environment Cabinet to aggressively assert its authority as the primary administrator of delegated environmental programs. We encourage the cabinet to prevent any of the federal Environmental Protection Agency's attempts to overstep its oversight role when the EPA demands action that is inconsistent with past state regulatory actions or determinations.

We encourage the Cabinet to ensure that existing environmental laws and regulations are applied and enforced in a consistent, nondiscriminatory manner at both public and private facilities.

3. To improve Kentucky's status as one of the nation's least healthy states, we support legislation to provide tax and other incentives for businesses implementing wellness programs for employees.

4. We urge the General Assembly to pass legislation allowing special local option sales taxes for municipalities to give cities the opportunity to raise funds for specific, voter-approved projects.

5. The chamber supports efforts to modernize Kentucky telecommunication regulations so that broadband Internet providers are more inclined to invest in the state and help all corners of the commonwealth have access to that vital service.

6. We encourage the General Assembly to investigate nontraditional methods and new standards to educate and train an appropriate workforce for the 21st Century. We support aggressive standards for evaluating the performance of students and schools, and the investigation and implementation of alternative ways for students who do not want to attend school to complete their education.

LOCAL INITIATIVES

1. We encourage local governments to implement streamlined processes necessary for the starting or expanding of businesses and the development of real property in our community. We also support efforts to house necessary permitting and licensing offices in a central location to simplify the methods by which new or expanding businesses can obtain necessary governmental documentation.

2. We urge the Henderson City Commission to approve the package of new business incentives presented last year, including the proposal to create a business liaison position within city government.

3. We encourage the city commission to amend open container laws to allow the use and sale of alcohol during permitted events which occur on public property.

Brad Schneider is president of the Henderson-Henderson County Chamber of Commerce.

Congressional leaders need a good whack

It looks like I am going to have to resurrect the old clown car, load that baby up with big red noses and head out to Clown Town, U.S.A., specifically where the big political clowns hang out, starting with our own illustrious clown, Sen. Mitch McConnell.

He plays politics with our tax money, like when he dropped off several thousands of those dollars right here in River City where it stretched our river walkway (which I have enjoyed numerous times).

I'm taking a small red nose and a four-foot 2 by 4 to my buddy, President Obama, with instructions on how to use the 2 by 4. Back in the old days down here in Kentucky, when you couldn't get the mule to cooperate, you would whack him with a 2 by 4 across the forehead. Usually one whack and he would gee-haw, get up and pay attention and go to work.

I think one whack will do the job for Red-nose Reid, but Boehner and McConnell will need at least two good whacks.

I'm going to tell The Prez (that's what I call him when we are one to one) that he's gonna have to walk tall and carry that big stick, and that he shouldn't have any trouble finding Boehner and McConnell in the dark because their noses will be a-blinkin'.

I'll need some help with all those noses when I go through the House and Senate, so I'm taking my Union County buddy Tommy Willett with me. He lives in Pride, and he "nose" all about politicians.

Legislature should restore felons' voting rights

From The Independent, Ashland, Ky.:

State Rep. Jesse Crenshaw, D-Lexington, has prefiled a bill for consideration by the 2013 General Assembly that would automatically restore the voting rights of most convicted felons upon completion of their sentences and probation.

It is a sensible idea that already exists in 46 states, but has been repeatedly rejected by the Republican majority in the state Senate.

Here's hoping the pattern of broad bipartisan approval by the House of Representatives and no action by the Senate will end in 2013 and Kentucky will finally join 46 other states in assuring individuals are not denied the right to vote for the rest of their lives for relatively minor felonies they may have committed as teenagers.

Crenshaw's bill, prefiled as Basic Resolution 166, proposes to amend Section 145 of the Constitution of Kentucky to allow persons convicted of a felony other than treason, intentional killing, a sex crime or bribery the right to vote after expiration of probation, final discharge from parole or maximum expiration of sentence.

The bill would require a vote of the people to become law.

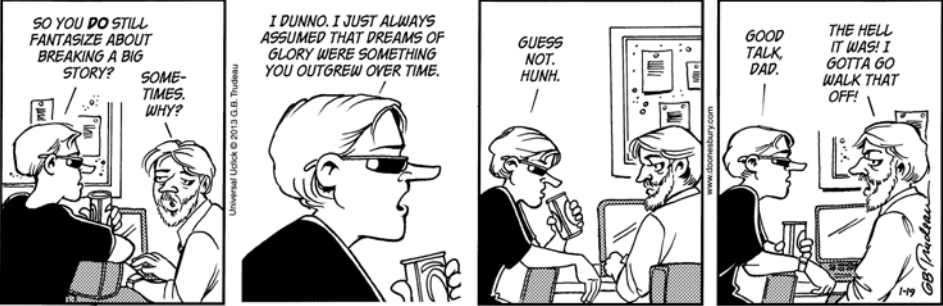

Currently, it requires a pardon by the governor to have their voting rights restored, but that should not be necessary. Once an individual has fully served his or her sentence and parole, his or her right to vote should be automatically restored.

That's the way it is in most states. ...

Crenshaw filed a nearly identical bill during the 2012 General Assembly and it was approved by the House by a lopsided 78-18 vote, only to languish without a vote in the Senate.

That's been the pattern during all recent sessions of the General Assembly, and one hopes the replacement of former Senate President David Williams by Robert Stivers will get this bill moving in the Senate.

Chicago lottery winner exhumed

By Jason Keyser
Associated Press

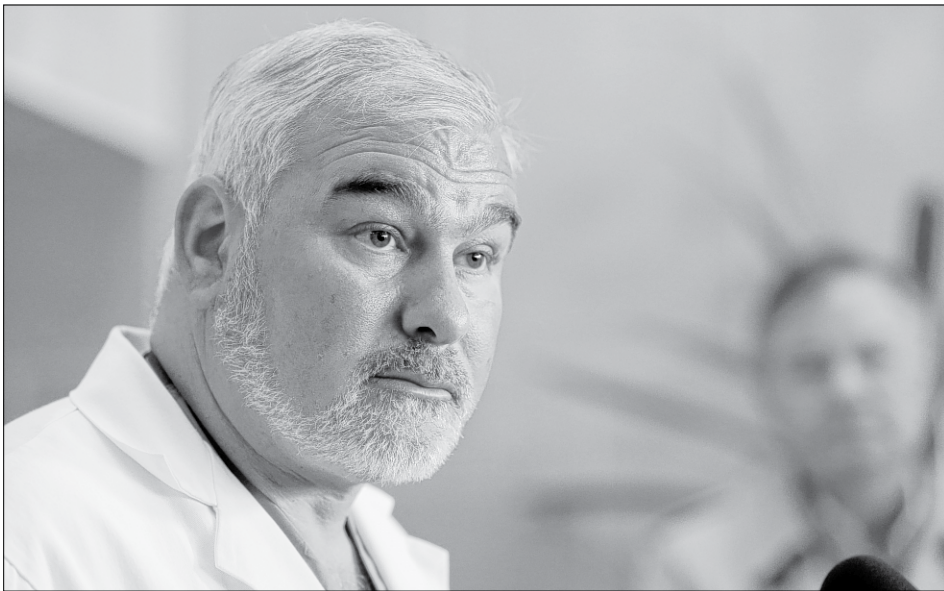

CHICAGO — Authorities Friday exhumed the body of a Chicago man who was poisoned with cyanide after winning the lottery and conducted an autopsy in the hopes that it will help solve the mystery surrounding his death.

The body of Urooj Khan was exhumed from a cemetery Friday morning and escorted by four police cars to the Cook County Medical Examiner's Office.

Pathologists collected samples of hair, nails and most major body organs, as well as contents of the stomach, Medical Examiner Stephen Cina said.

Khan, 46, died in July as he was about to collect $425,000 in lottery winnings. His death was ruled a result of natural causes. But a relative whose identity remains a mystery asked for further tests that revealed he had been poisoned.

Khan was given a religious burial and his body was not embalmed. The body was wrapped in a shroud and placed inside a wooden box with a Styrofoam lid that was itself inside a concrete vault.

"The body was in a state of advanced decomposition, but we were able to identify the major organs and take samples of each of these for toxicological analysis," Cina said.

Given the length of time Khan's body was in the ground, Cina said it was not certain investigators would be able to determine exactly how he ingested the poison.

"I can't really predict how the results are going to turn out. Cyanide over the postmortem period actually can essentially evaporate and leave the tissues. So it is possible that cyanide that was in the tissues is no longer in the tissues after several months," he told reporters during an afternoon news conference.

Ex-NOLA mayor Nagin indicted for corruption

■ Officials: Nagin got $200,000 in bribes

By Michael Kunzelman
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — More than a decade ago, Ray Nagin was elected mayor of New Orleans on a vow to root out corruption in a city plagued by decades of it.

On Friday, the former mayor was indicted on charges he lined his pockets with bribe money, payoffs and gratuities while the chronically poor city struggled to recover from Hurricane Katrina's punishing blow.

The federal indictment alleges that city contractors paid Nagin more than $200,000 in bribes and subsidized his trips to Hawaii, Jamaica and other places in exchange for his help securing millions of dollars in work for the city.

Nagin's charges are the product of a City Hall corruption investigation that already has resulted in guilty pleas by two former city officials and two businessmen and a prison sentence for a former city vendor.

The case also punctuates the reversal of political and personal fortune for Nagin, who had what New Orleans Magazine editor Errol Laborde called "rock star status" soon after his election in 2002.

Nagin, a former television executive, took office with an image as a largely apolitical businessman ready to root out corruption.

But Nagin's popularity and support waned in the years after Katrina. The federal investigation was mushrooming by the time he left office in 2010.

Rafael Goyeneche, head of the nonprofit watchdog agency the Metropolitan Crime Commission, remembers Nagin entering office with a call for the public to let authorities know about corruption.

"To go from the mandate that he was elected with to reading this indictment today and finding out that he was in many respects, if these allegations are true, a complete fraud, is eye-opening," Goyeneche said.

In inauguration remarks May 6, 2002, Nagin promised a City Hall "where permits and licenses are provided quickly, predictably and honestly; where contracts are awarded based on what you can do, not who you know."

Blast, car bombs cap bloody week

A rocket slammed into a building in Syria's northern city of Aleppo and two suicide bombers struck near a mosque in the south Friday, capping a particularly bloody week in the country's civil war with more than 800 civilians killed, including an unusually large proportion in government-held areas.

The residential building struck in Aleppo was in a part of the city controlled by regime forces, as was a university hit earlier in the week in an attack that killed 87 people, mostly students. The government accused rebels in both attacks, saying they hit the locations with rockets, a claim the opposition denies.

But if confirmed it would signal that the rebels have acquired more sophisticated weaponry from captured regime bases and are now using them to take the fight more into government-held areas in an attempt to break a monthslong stalemate in the war.

Rebels have in the past posted videos showing them capturing heavy rockets — apparently of the style fired from truck-mounted launchers — at regime military bases that they have overrun. But it is not clear whether the fighters have — or are able to — use any of the ballistics. The rebels' main weaponry are automatic rifles and rocket-propelled grenades.

Panetta: NATO must work together

LONDON — As international military operations continued in Algeria and Mali, Defense Secretary Leon Panetta urged NATO Friday to be more innovative and flexible so it can keep "relentless pressure" on al-Qaida and be able to respond to a broad range of security threats in the future.

Panetta was speaking as officials were still trying to sort out details in the kidnapping and possible rescue effort of hostages, including Americans, in Algeria. He said NATO nations must work together to help other countries beef up their security and ensure that terrorists can't establish safe havens in places like North Africa or anywhere in the world.

Just after he spoke, Panetta went to No. 10 Downing St., where he met for 45 minutes with British Prime Minister David Cameron and exchanged updates on the Algeria operation, where Algerian forces tried to rescue hostages held by Islamic militants at a natural gas facility.

Palestinians set up protest camp

JERUSALEM — Palestinian activists have set up a protest camp in the West Bank to demonstrate against what they say is an Israeli land grab.

They say they set up a mosque and several tents Friday in the village of Beit Iksa near Jerusalem.

The move comes a week after Palestinian activists set up a similar camp in a strategic West Bank corridor known as E-1 where Israel said it would build a large settlement. The activists were evacuated a day later.

In a statement, activists said they were securing land from Israel.

The Israeli military said soldiers were monitoring the area to prevent disturbances.

Bolshoi ballet chief has surgery after acid attack

■ Colleagues fear assault was retaliation

By Lynn Berry
and Nataliya Vasilyeva
Associated Press

MOSCOW — An acid attack on the artistic director of the Bolshoi ballet has shone the spotlight on the fierce "Black Swan"-like competition for starring roles at the famed Russian dance company.

The attack on Sergei Filin could be in retaliation for his selection of certain dancers over others for the prized roles, his colleagues said Friday. They expressed fears that Filin, a 42-year-old former Bolshoi star, could be left partially blind after a masked assailant threw acid in his face as he returned home in Moscow late Thursday.

Filin suffered third-degree burns on his face and underwent eye surgery Friday evening to try to save his sight, Bolshoi spokeswoman Katerina Novikova said. Doctors said his right eye was badly burned and it would not be clear for days whether the operation was a success.

The Bolshoi Theater is one of Russia's premier cultural institutions, best known for "Swan Lake" and the other grand classical ballets that grace its Moscow stage. But backstage, the ballet company has been troubled by deep intrigue and infighting that have led to the departure of several artistic directors over the last few years.

The Bolshoi's general director, Anatoly Iksanov, said he believes the attack was linked to Filin's work.

"He is a man of principle and never compromised," Iksanov said on Channel One state television. "If he believed that this or that dancer was not ready or was unable to perform this or that part, he would turn them down."

The fierce competition for roles in classical ballet was highlighted in the 2010 Oscar-winning film "Black Swan." In the psychological thriller, dancers played by Natalie Portman and Mila Kunis vie to prove to the artistic director that only they should be chosen to perform as the sensual Black Swan.

Anastasia Volochkova, a former Bolshoi ballerina who danced with Filin, described a "terrible, wild fight" for roles at the Bolshoi.

No dropped charge in Sept. 11 case

SAN JUAN — The prosecution of five Guantánamo Bay prisoners accused of orchestrating the Sept. 11 attacks will go on — for now — with eight charges against each of the men, the Pentagon said Friday.

A Department of Defense legal official declined a prosecution request to withdraw the charge of conspiracy, which faced a likely challenge because of an appeal's court ruling in a separate case.

Convening Authority Bruce McDonald, a retired admiral and former Navy judge advocate general, said it was too soon to withdraw conspiracy because the ruling in the separate case might also ultimately be reversed.

The uncertain legal standing of the conspiracy charge will be a contested issue as the U.S. prepares to prosecute the five men before a military tribunal at the U.S. base in Cuba, a trial that is likely at least a year away.

Even if the conspiracy charge is later dropped from the case, all five could still get the death penalty.

French surround key town in Mali

By Baba Ahmed
and Krista Larson
Associated Press

BAMAKO, Mali — French troops encircled a key Malian town Friday to stop radical Islamists from striking closer to the capital, a French official said.

The move to surround Diabaly came as French and Malian authorities said they had retaken Konna, the central city whose capture prompted the French military intervention last week.

The United Nations warned that some 700,000 civilians could be displaced by the fighting in Mali, where the French-led international force is trying to oust the rebels from power in the north.

The French forces moved around Diabaly to cut off supplies to the Islamist extremists, who have held the town since Monday, said a French official.

The Malian military chased the Islamists from Konna and are now holding the town, a Malian military official said Friday.

Telephone lines were cut off in the town, making it difficult to independently verify the claim though the French official also confirmed the rebels no longer hold Konna.

In Geneva, United Nations refugee agency spokeswoman Melissa Fleming said that the number of displaced Malians is expected to increase dramatically in the coming months.

Those who have fled "mentioned that large amounts of money are being offered to civilians to fight against the Malian army and its supporters," she said.

Charities fear tax law will cut giving

By Stephen Ohlemacher
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Charities and nonprofit organizations are worried that new limits on tax deductions for high earners will hurt donations just as charitable giving is starting to rebound from the depths of the recession.

Experts doubt the new limits on deductions will have much impact on giving, but some major nonprofit organizations fear they're a sign that the charitable deduction is no longer sacrosanct on Capitol Hill, just as Congress is promising a broader effort later this year to overhaul the tax code.

The limits on deductions are part of the new tax law Congress passed on New Year's Day. They reduce the value of all itemized deductions for individuals making more than $250,000 and married couples making more than $300,000. Advocates are concerned the limits will reduce the tax incentive for people to make donations to charities and nonprofits such as religious institutions, colleges and groups that help the poor.

"The charitable deduction incentive is different than any other deduction or credit in the tax code," said Sandra Swirski, executive director of the Alliance for Charitable Reform, which lobbies on behalf of donors and private foundations. That's because the deduction encourages people to give away income, while other deductions and credits encourage people to buy things they can then write off, she noted.

Charitable giving in the U.S. increased in 2010 and 2011, according to the latest data. But it has yet to fully return to pre-recession levels, according to data from the Giving USA Foundation and the Indiana University School of Philanthropy.

Charitable giving by individuals, foundations and corporations topped $298 billion in 2011. In 2007, it was $337 billion, in inflation-adjusted dollars.

The new tax provision reduces the amount of itemized deductions a taxpayer can claim by 3 cents for every dollar of income above the threshold. For example, if a married couple has an adjusted gross income of $400,000, that's $100,000 above the threshold, so the itemized deductions would be reduced by $3,000.

Itemized deductions cannot be reduced by more than 80 percent, under the provision.

In this example, if the couple had a total of $60,000 in itemized deductions, they could claim only $57,000. If they were in the 33 percent income tax bracket, the provision would increase their taxes by $990.

The provision is a revival of the "Pease" limitation, first enacted in 1990 but phased out in 2010 as part of the massive package of Bush-era tax cuts. It is named after a deceased congressman, Rep. Donald Pease, D-Ohio, who wrote the measure.

Experts say there is no evidence that the limitation reduced charitable giving in the past, and no reason to think it will have much of an impact going forward. Charitable giving steadily increased in the 1990s, when the economy flourished.

One analysis estimates that, on balance, charitable giving will increase slightly because of the new tax law. That's because high earners facing the increased tax rates have more incentive to seek deductions, and those deductions become more valuable.

The new law increases the top income tax rate from 35 percent to 39.6 percent on taxable income above $400,000 for individuals and $450,000 for married couples. It also increases the top tax rate on long-term capital gains for taxpayers with incomes above those thresholds.

CEOs call for raising the retirement age

By Stephen Ohlemacher
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An influential group of business CEOs is pushing a plan to gradually increase the full retirement age to 70 for both Social Security and Medicare and to partially privatize the health insurance program for older Americans.

The Business Roundtable's plan would protect those 55 and older from cuts but younger workers would face significant changes. The plan unveiled Wednesday would result in smaller annual benefit increases for all Social Security recipients. Initial benefits for wealthy retirees would also be smaller.

Medicare recipients would be able to enroll in the traditional program or in private plans that could adjust premiums based on age and health status.

"America can preserve the health and retirement safety net and rein in long-term spending growth by modernizing Medicare and Social Security in a way that addresses America's new fiscal and demographic realities," said Gary Loveman, chairman, president and chief executive of casino giant Caesars Entertainment Corp.

Loveman, who chairs the Business Roundtable's health and retirement committee, said the business leaders will be meeting with members of Congress and the administration to press them to enact their plan.

The proposal comes as Republican leaders in Congress are calling for spending cuts as part of an agreement to increase the government's authority to borrow. Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner says the U.S. will exhaust its borrowing authority as soon as mid-February, raising the possibility of a first-ever national default.

President Barack Obama has said he is willing to negotiate deficit reduction with GOP leaders but insists that those talks be separate from decisions to raise the $16.4 trillion debt ceiling. Obama has warned that if Congress does not raise the debt ceiling, the economy could crash and Social Security checks and veterans' benefits would be delayed.

The Business Roundtable is an association of CEOs of some of the largest U.S. companies. Member companies account for nearly a third of the total value of the U.S. stock market, according to the group.

The group has been an ally of Obama in the past, endorsing his proposal to raise taxes on high earners during negotiations over the so-called "fiscal cliff" in December. Obama has embraced some parts of the business group's plan for Social Security and Medicare, but he opposes any plan to privatize Medicare, and has backed away from his earlier support for raising the eligibility age.

Retirees can now get reduced Social Security benefits starting at age 62. Retirees must wait until they are 66 to get full Social Security benefits, a threshold that is gradually rising to 67. The eligibility age for Medicare is 65. The business group's plan would make unspecified accommodations for people with physically demanding jobs.

Social Security and Medicare both face long-term financial problems as aging baby boomers reach retirement, leaving relatively fewer workers behind to fund the massive benefit programs.

Tax fraud a popular pastime among prison inmates

By Stepehn Ohlemacher
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Tax fraud appears to be a popular pastime in the nation's prisons, but the Internal Revenue Service is catching on.

The IRS detected more than 173,000 fraudulent tax returns from prison inmates last year, many of them using stolen identities and other false information in an attempt to get tax refunds. That's more than twice the number of fraudulent returns detected from inmates in 2010, according to a report Thursday by the Treasury Department's inspector general for tax administration.

In all, the IRS says it stopped inmates from illegally claiming $2.5 billion in tax refunds in the 2012 budget year. About $1.1 billion was claimed by just two inmates.

Over the years, investigators have found that crafty inmates will go to great lengths to try to steal identities or trick the IRS into sending them a refund they don't deserve, said IG spokeswoman Karen Kraushaar.

Some inmates scour obituaries, looking for people's identities to steal. Others use the identities of fellow inmates or even their own. Some use their access to computers to file tax returns online. They can have refunds electronically deposited into the bank accounts of friends on the outside.

Some inmates have identified businesses that have filed for bankruptcy and claimed to work there, using the bankruptcy as an excuse for why the company didn't send them a W-2 form.

Transcripts show Fed underestimated crisis in 2007

By Martin Ctsinger and Christopher S. Rugaber
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve on Friday released transcripts of its eight regular meetings and three emergency telephone conference calls in 2007. The meetings occurred as the country was on the brink of the worst financial crisis since the Great Depression.

The transcripts paint a picture of a central bank that was forced to switch from worrying about inflation and only gradually recognized the scope of the approaching crisis. That year, the Fed began to cut interest rates and “I think the most likely outcome is that the economy will move forward toward a soft landing.”

Janet Yellen, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco in 2007 took extraordinary steps to ease credit and shore up confidence in the banking system.

But Fed policymakers and staff often underestimated the magnitude of the crisis and how it would ultimately affect the U.S. economy, the transcripts show.

In 2007, the housing crisis deepened. Banks and hedge funds that had invested big in subprime mortgages were left with worthless assets as foreclosures rose. The damage reached the top echelons of Wall Street.

At the Oct. 30 meeting, Janet Yellen, then-president of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, said the economy faced increased risks. But she hardly predicted anything dire. “I think the most likely outcome is that the economy will move forward toward a soft landing,” she said.

By December, the economy had plunged into the Great Recession, which would last until June 2009. Five years later, the economy has yet to fully recover.

The Fed did take action in 2007, although investors seemed to think it waited too long.

Markets were disappointed when the Fed refused to cut interest rate cuts at its Aug. 7 meeting. After the meeting, the Fed released a statement declaring that the threats to growth had only “increased somewhat.”

At the meeting, various Fed officials stated their belief that the biggest threat facing the economy was inflation, the transcripts show.

Days later, BNP Paribas, France's largest bank, announced that it was suspending withdrawals from three investment funds, a move that jolted financial markets around the world.

On Aug. 10, the Fed held the first of three emergency conference calls to discuss the emerging crisis. The committee announced that it would pump billions of dollars into financial markets to try and calm turmoil on Wall Street and ease the tightening of credit.

One week later, the Fed called an emergency meeting to cut the discount rate on loans to banks.

In September, the Fed cut its key short-term interest rate for the first time since June 25, 2003. The Fed would cut the rate two more times in 2007 as the financial crisis worsened.

Still, the transcripts showed the central bank struggled through the year to develop a clear sense of how serious the unfolding crisis could be.

At the Fed's final meeting of that year in December, the central bank's staff presented an economic forecast for 2008 that proved to be overly optimistic.

Wheat prices advanced on concern that dry weather conditions in the plains region will harm this year's crop. The grain recorded its biggest weekly advance since last year's drought.

The price of wheat has been recovering this week following a sell-off that began in early December. This year's crop in the U.S. may be hurt by a lack of rain in the Great Plains region and dry weather in Australia, where it is now summer, may also damage the harvest there.

*There's a continued dry situation in the southern plains that's not going away, so our winter wheat crop is being threatened," said Darin Newsom, a senior analyst at DTN.

Wheat for March delivery rose 10 cents to $7.9125 a bushel Friday. The grain has risen 5 percent this week, its biggest weekly advance since July.

In other grains trading, corn edged higher the March contract rising 3 cents to $7.275 a bushel. The grain has advanced nine out the last 10 days.

Soybeans for March delivery rose 1 cent to $14.2925 a bushel.

In energy trading, oil remained at a four-month high after new data showed China's economy rebounded and the International Energy Agency predicted higher global demand.

Benchmark oil for February delivery rose 7 cents to finish at $95.56 per barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the highest since Sept. 17, when crude was above $96 a barrel.

March gasoline rose 2.88 cents to $2.8113 a gallon. Heating oil for March delivery gained 2.74 cents to $3.0419 a gallon and natural gas ended up 7.2 cents at $3.566 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Trading in metals was mixed. March silver gained 12 cents to $32.932 an ounce, and copper also gained, rising 1.7 cents to $3.6790 a pound.

Gold for February delivery fell $3.80 to $1,687 an ounce. Platinum for April dropped $26.50 to $1,674 an ounce. March palladium fell $3.40 to $722.75.

GE earnings rise on market growth

General Electric Co. has been re-energized.

Performance at all of the conglomerate's industrial segments is improving thanks to cost cutting, a shift in strategy and growth in emerging markets.

GE, based in Fairfield, Conn., reported an operating profit per share of 44 cents, a penny higher than analysts polled by FactSet expected. Perhaps more importantly for shareholders, GE's revenue rose 4 percent to $39.3 billion and beat Wall Street expectations. Shares rose 3 percent by midday.

CEO Jeff Immelt said the outlook for developed markets remained uncertain. But China and other emerging markets, along with regions that are exploiting natural resources, are growing.

Unemployment rate falls in 22 states

Unemployment rates fell in less than half of U.S. states last month, as steady but slow hiring is making only gradual improvement in the job market.

The Labor Department says that rates fell in 22 states in December and rose in 16. They were unchanged in 12. Nationwide, the rate remained 7.8 percent.

The rate is now below 7 percent in 25 states. And some of the states hardest hit in the recession have seen solid gains. Nevada's unemployment rate, the highest in the nation, plummeted 0.6 percentage points last month to 10.2 percent.

Rhode Island's unemployment rate, also 10.2 percent, dropped from 10.4 percent in November.

California has the third-highest rate, at 9.8 percent, the same as the previous month but down from 11.2 percent a year ago.

Treasury announces plan to sell GM stock

The U.S. Treasury Department says it has come up with a plan on how it will sell the remaining 300.1 million shares of stock it owns in General Motors. The process will bring to an end almost four years of partial government ownership of the car maker.

Treasury said Friday that the plan would be implemented by JPMorgan Securities and Citigroup Global Markets, the two financial firms it has hired to sell its remaining GM stock.

Treasury would not reveal specific details of the sales plan or provide further information on timing.

But officials said that the timing has not changed from December's announcement that it would sell the remaining stock shares over the next 12 to 15 months, subject to market conditions.

WHAT DOES THE BIBLE SAY:

“WHY THE CHANGES”

I was recently asked during a Bible study why do some churches endorse or accept things that God condemns. My response was that there was no respect for the Bible as God's authority. More and more religious groups are allowing things to be done with full acceptance that heretofore were not allowed. Once any religious group separates themselves from the truth they are certain to follow a downward spiral. A good example of such is in I Kings 12. After the death of Solomon the Israelites were divided (northern and southern kingdoms). Jereboam was selected to be the king of the northern tribe (12:20). Consider what he did in departing from God's way. (1) He changed the object of worship (12:28). He made golden images for the people to bow before. (2) He changed the place of worship (12:29). To keep the northern tribes out of Jerusalem he set up two separate man-made places for worship (Dan and Bethel). Note that this was a sin (12:30). (3) He changed the priesthood. Rather than select priests from the tribe of Levi he allowed people from any tribe to be a priest (12:31). (4) He changed the date of a special feast day (12:32). The real clue to this departure is found in the wording of (Vs. 33). Jereboam did what he “devised in his own heart”. Here is the heart of the problem. More and more religious people are bowing to the demands of an evil world. A choice has to be made-It is God's word or man's desires! Read the Bible for yourself because Satan can even use preachers to dispense his evil purposes (2 Corinthians 11: 13-15). Search the scriptures. We offer free Bible study guides.

Court: Rumors not enough to back complaint

By Brett Barroquere
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE—Rumors and gossip may be ugly, but a court says those alone are not enough to support a sex discrimination case.

The Kentucky Court of Appeals on Friday turned away an appeal by a captain at the Louisville jail claiming rumors about her having a relationship with a superior officer thwarted her ability to be promoted quickly.

“Idle gossip alone is not a sufficient basis for a claim of a hostile work environment,” Judge Kelly Thompson wrote for a three-judge panel.

Dawn Thompson sued the Louisville Metro Department of corrections in 2009, saying repeated untrue stories about a romantic relationship between her and another officer at the jail kept her from being promoted sooner from lieutenant to captain.

Judge Thompson wrote that the gossip spread by co-workers may be hurtful, but Thompson didn’t provide any evidence to back up her claims.

Dawn Thompson started work as a correctional officer at the jail in 1997.

She became friends with a superior officer, Kevin Sidebottom, after being assigned to the training division with him in 2004, after she attained the rank of sergeant.

Sidebottom expressed an interest in a romantic relationship in 2005, a move Dawn Thompson rebuffed. Sidebottom ended the pursuit and the friendship faded.

In the coming years, Dawn Thompson reported hearing rumors about a romantic relationship between her and Sidebottom.

The judge concluded that the rumors did not interfere with her work and resulted in no complaints.

Dawn Thompson and another officer had a confrontation in 2006 over a man both were dating.

Dawn Thompson sought promotion to captain later that year, but was bypassed when the promotions were announced in January 2007 even though she finished second overall based on the testing criteria.

U.S. Rep. Ed Whitfield addresses the crowd during Friday’s news conference in Morganfield concerning the cuts to the Earle C. Clements Job Corps Academy.

sympathetic to the idea of the federal government saving money, but that he vehemently disagrees with what he characterized as the heavy-handed way the Labor Department is going about it.

“In my view the job corps center provides a second opportunity for a lot of people who haven’t had even one opportunity,” he said. “It can help them become productive citizens in our community.

“I don’t think we’ve been treated fairly on this” because the department hasn’t given the centers an opportunity to resolve the issue. “It was just an edict that’s been made and that’s it.”

The center is operated by the private firm of Management and Training Corp., and Celeste McDonald of the firm’s corporate office sat at the table while Whitfield spoke.

“We couldn’t have been more surprised and shocked when we got the notice a couple of hours ago that not only would the center be cut 650 slots, but that it was going to have to stop enrolling students,” she said.

The center was also prohibited from accepting new students in November and December.

The firm has “alternative cost saving strategies” that the Labor Department should consider, McDonald said. “We can all tighten our belts; we can all just go bare bones” in ways that don’t stop student training or impact staff jobs.

How many of the 502 staff jobs at the center would be impacted? “I don’t know exact numbers,” she said, noting cutbacks would not be commensurate with the cuts in student enrollment. “It’s not going to be quite that same way on staff because there are some fixed costs ... so you can’t exactly halve your staff, but it’s going to be significant if it goes through.”

The Labor Department spokesman said the enrollment cutbacks are necessary “to maintain an appropriate fiscal balance. What we’ve experienced is, we’ve created more positions than we have funding for” and the department needs to bring enrollment in line with available funds.

“This is temporary,” Kuruvilla said. “As the economy improves overall, we hope to return those slots” to current levels.

Whitfield, however, is not so sure that the cutbacks aren’t aimed for permanence. “This puts us in something of a crisis situation,” he said. “The sad thing is, it means Jeff (Barton, the center’s director) is probably going to be forced to start laying off some people very soon unless we can get this reversed in some way.

“When we set this meeting up a couple of days ago we didn’t realize this (enrollment moratorium) would be coming out as quickly as it did,” he said. “But that makes our job that much more urgent. We’re going to do everything we can do through every avenue open to us to try to get it reversed.”

Gleaner staff writer Chuck Stinnett contributed to this article.

of anonymity because they weren’t authorized to speak publicly on the matter.

Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said she spoke by telephone with Algerian Prime Minister Abdelmalek Sellal to get an update on Americans and others in danger at the sprawling Ain Amenas refinery 800 miles south of Algiers. She said the “utmost care must be taken to preserve innocent life.”

Clinton talked to reporters after the Obama administration confirmed that Americans were still being held hostage, even as some U.S. citizens were being flown out of the country for recovery in Europe. The Algerian state news agency reported that 12 hostages had been killed since Wednesday’s start of an Algerian rescue operation, and world leaders steadily increased their criticism of the North African country’s handling of the attack.

Clinton, however, defended Algeria’s action. “Let’s not forget: This is an act of terror,” she told reporters in Washington. “The perpetrators are the terrorists. They are the ones who have assaulted this facility, have taken hostage Algerians and others from around the world as they were going about their daily business.”

Earlier Friday, Algeria’s state news service reported that nearly 100 of the 132 foreign workers kidnapped by Islamic militants were free. That number of hostages at the remote desert facility was significantly higher than any previous report, but questions remained about the fate of more than 30 other foreign energy workers.

BP evacuated one American, along with other foreign workers, to Mallorca, Spain, and then to London. And an American official said a U.S. military C-130 flew a group of people, including some lightly wounded or injured, from Algiers to a U.S. facility in Europe on Friday. The official wasn’t authorized to speak publicly on the matter and requested anonymity.

The newly renovated medical floor includes all private patient suites with in-room showers and restrooms.

Hillary Rodham Clinton, Secretary of State

“Let’s not forget: This is an act of terror. The perpetrators are the terrorists. They are the ones who have assaulted this facility, have taken hostage Algerians and others from around the world as they were going about their daily business.”

In London, Defense Secretary Leon Panetta met with British Prime Minister David Cameron at No. 10 Downing St. to assess their governments’ understandings of the situation. At King’s College, Panetta said the U.S. is “working around the clock to ensure the safe return of our citizens” and that terrorists should be on notice they will find no sanctuary in Algeria or North Africa.

The White House said President Barack Obama was being briefed Friday by his national security team. His top aides were in touch with Algerian officials as well as BP’s security office in London. BP jointly operates the natural gas plant.

U.S. officials have refused to confirm the number of Americans still captive or unaccounted for because they say that might compromise their safety.

Still, the U.S. flatly rejected an offer by the militants — led by a Mali-based al-Qaida offshoot known as the Masked Brigade — to free two American hostages in exchange for the release of Omar Abdel Rahman, a blind sheikh convicted of plotting to blow up New York City landmarks and considered the spiritual leader of the 1993 World Trade Center bombing, and Aafia Siddiqui, a Pakistani scientist convicted of shooting at two U.S. soldiers in Afghanistan. Both are jailed in the United States.

“The United States does not negotiate with terrorists,” State Department spokeswoman Victoria Nuland said.

The desert siege began Wednesday when the militants attempted to hijack two buses at the plant, were repelled, and then seized the gas refinery. They said the attack was retaliation for France’s recent military intervention against Islamist rebels in neighboring Mali, but security experts argue it must have taken weeks of planning to hit the remote site.

Since then, Algeria’s government has kept a tight grip on information about the siege.

Clinton stressed that American officials would stay in close contact with their Algerian counterparts. Sellal, she said, made clear that the Algerian operation against the militants “was still ongoing, that the situation remained fluid, that the hostages remain in danger in a number of instances.”

Speaking beside Japan’s new foreign minister, Fumio Kishida, Clinton said the crisis underscored the threat posed by extremists in North Africa, where al-Qaida-linked militants have seized control of half of Mali and plunged the country into civil war. She vowed to enhance U.S. work with Algeria and other countries in the region to combat terrorists even after the hostage situation ends.

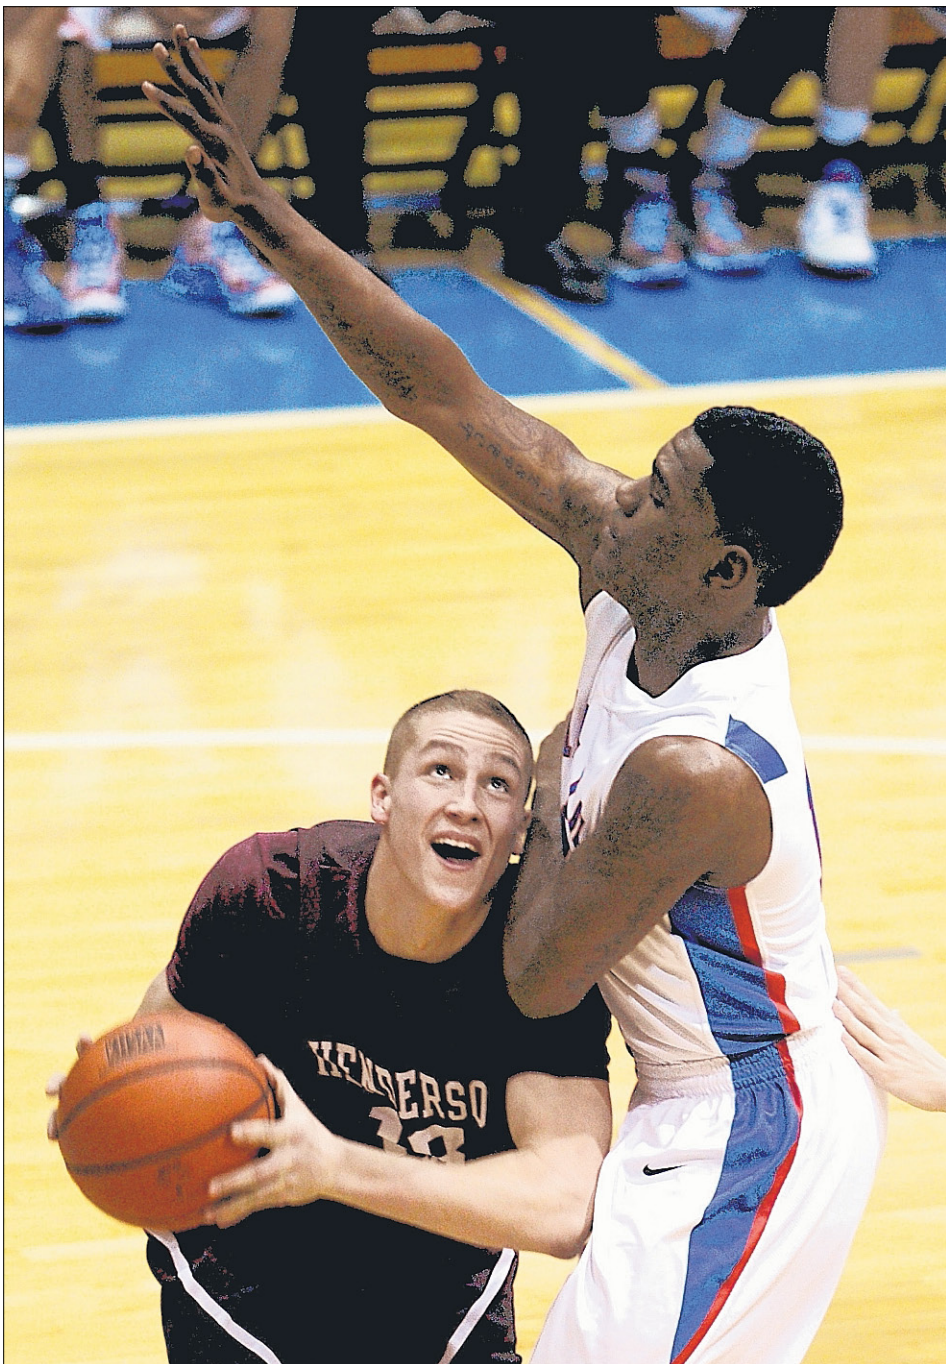

“It is absolutely essential that as we work to resolve this particular terrible situation, we continue to broaden and deepen our counterterrorism cooperation,” Clinton said. “We will not rest until we do as much as we can ... to restore security to this vital region, and to bring those who would terrorize and kill innocent people to justice.”

Armstrong shamed by doping scandal

CHICAGO — Lance Armstrong says the most humbling moment in his doping scandal was being forced to step aside from the Livestrong charity he founded.

In part two of his televised interview with Oprah Winfrey on Friday night, he described the anguish of losing longtime sponsors like Nike and Trek, among others.

But he said Livestrong, a cancer-fighting foundation, was like “my sixth child.”

Armstrong admitted using performance-enhancing drugs to win the Tour de France seven times in part one, which aired Thursday night.

Big East revises football schedule

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — The Big East has released a revised 2013 schedule that will have each of its 10 football teams playing eight regular-season conference games.

The announcement Friday came after Boise State and San Diego State decided to remain in the Mountain West Conference. That scuttled the Big East’s plan to split into two six-team divisions for football and hold a championship game.

The Big East will have newcomers Central Florida, Houston, Memphis and SMU join Louisville, Cincinnati, Rutgers, Connecticut, Temple and South Florida for football.

Suns part ways with coach Gentry

PHOENIX — The Phoenix Suns say the team and coach Alvin Gentry have “mutually agreed to part ways.”

Gentry had coached the Suns since replacing the fired Terry Porter at the All-Star break of the 2008-09 season, compiling a 158-144 record. His 2010 squad, led by Steve Nash, advanced to the Western Conference finals.

But Nash left and the team underwent what has been a disastrous rebuilding effort. The Suns have lost 13 of 15 and four straight at home. Their 13-28 record is worst in the Western Conference.

Gussie Moran dies at age 89

LOS ANGELES — Gussie Moran, who shocked a Wimbledon crowd in 1949 when she took the court in a scandalously short skirt and ruffled underwear, has died.

Tennis writer and friend Jack Neworth says Moran died of cancer Wednesday at her apartment in Los Angeles. She was 89.

When she was 25, Moran made jaws drop at the All-England Tennis Club when she did away with the knee-length skirt most women wore at the time.

SEATTLE — Doug Kent, winner of 10 Professional Bowlers Association Tour titles, including four major championships, and Danny Wiseman, a 12-time tour winner with one major, are going into the PBA Hall of Fame.

Some success stories

■ New college basketball coaches have had mixed results

By John Marshall
Associated Press

In his first season as Kentucky’s coach, John Calipari led the Wildcats to 35 wins and a trip to the regional finals of the NCAA tournament.

Coach Cal’s first season was a bit of an anomaly; most coaches don’t have that kind of success right after taking over a team.

Calipari did have an advantage. It was Kentucky, after all.

It usually takes a little longer for coaches to put their imprint on the program by getting their own players and their own philosophies in place.

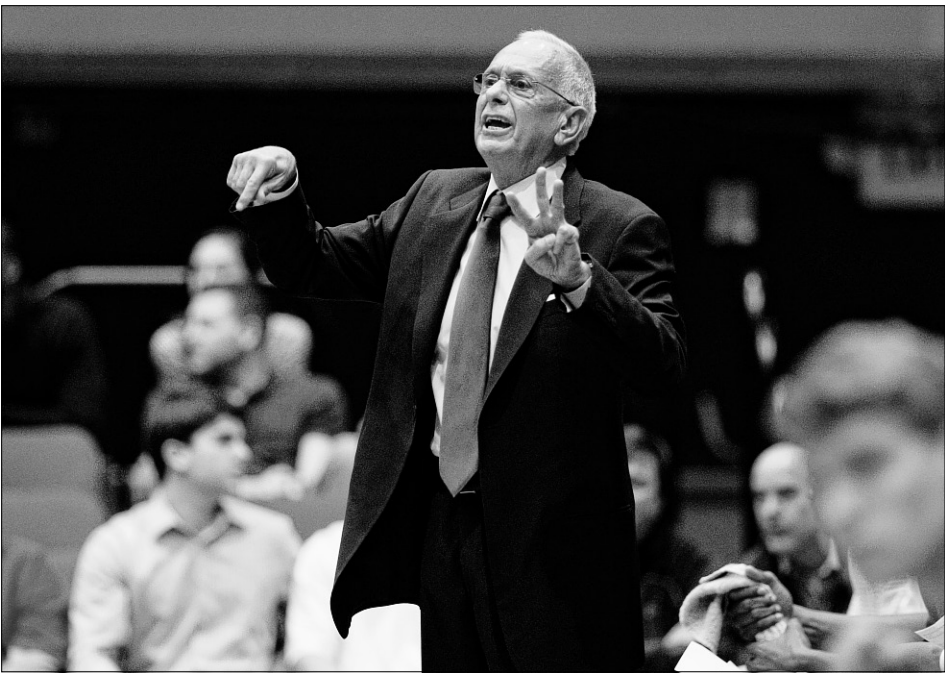

Many don’t get very long to do it, either, which is why there’s so much turnover seemingly every year, including more than three dozen before this season.

Some of the new coaches have had decent starts at their new homes, while others have labored.

Here’s a few that have had varying degrees of success so far:

Larry Brown, SMU: Brown was 71 when he was hired and hadn’t coached in college since leading Kansas to the 1988 NCAA title, so there were more than a few question marks when he took over the Mustangs. Brown made the transition a seamless one, leading SMU to eight wins in its first nine games while creating excitement that Moody Coliseum hasn’t seen in years. The Mustangs (11-8) have lost three of four to open Conference USA, including Wednesday’s 74-70 setback against conference leader Southern Mississippi, but Brown seems to have them on the right track, making it look like he never left the college game.

Bruce Weber, Kansas State: Weber took over a program that had five straight 20-win seasons and had been to the NCAA tournament four times under previous coach Frank Martin. He’s tried to keep the Wildcats rolling by being the anti-Martin — calm to fiery Frank’s screaming. The nonconference schedule was shaky at times, including blowout losses to Michigan and Gonzaga, along with uninspired wins over Missouri-Kansas City and South Dakota. But the Wildcats (14-2) also upset then-No. 8 Florida and have opened the Big 12 season with three straight victories, including over No. 22 Oklahoma State in the opener, to move up to No. 16 in the latest Top 25 poll.

Danny Manning, Tulsa: The former Kansas star was a protege under Bill Self in Lawrence, so he learned from one of college basketball’s best. Manning took over a program that didn’t have much of an identity and tried to mold it in his own hard-working image. It’s been an up-and-down process. The Golden Hurricane opened with three wins their first four games, then lost four of six and are now back on the upward trend after opening Conference USA 3-1. He also beat his former coach, Larry Brown, when Pat Swilling Jr. hit a 3-pointer with 3.8 seconds left to give the Golden Hurricane (11-7) a 48-47 over SMU on Jan. 6. Beating his former coach is a nice accomplishment no matter what happens the rest of the way.

Kevin Ollie, Connecticut: The former Huskies point guard was given a one-year contract to serve as Jim Calhoun’s successor after the Hall of Fame coach retired last year. The school’s administration didn’t get halfway through the season before signing him to a long-term deal that will keep him at UConn through the 2017-18 season. Despite losing five underclassmen after Calhoun left, the Huskies opened 10-2. UConn followed with losses to Marquette and new No. 1 Louisville on Monday night, but it also beat then-No. 17 Notre Dame on the road. The Huskies (12-4) still have a tough road through the Big East, but have their coach for the future in Ollie.

Frank Martin, South Carolina: Martin was elevated to the head job at Kansas State after Bob Huggins left. He turned the Wildcats into a national power and now he’s trying to do the same thing in Columbia. Taking over a program that had gone into a free-fall the previous four seasons under Darrin Horn, Martin had his work cut out for him with a team picked to finish 13th in the SEC. Martin’s intensity has worked so far with the Gamecocks (11-5), who opened the season strong and gave Martin his first win the conference by beating LSU on Wednesday after a pair of opening SEC losses.

Richard Pitino, Florida International: Like Manning, Pitino learned from one of the best minds in basketball. Unlike Manning, his mentor was his father, Louisville coach Rick Pitino. The younger Pitino got his first head-coaching job at 29 and had a big hill to climb at FIU, taking over a program that hasn’t had a winning record since going 16-14 in 1999-2000. Even with a roster he had to piece together, Pitino has been able to make the Golden Panthers (8-8) respectable, keeping them around .500 most of the season. Not bad for a program that has struggled for so long.

Notre Dame to Te’o: Time to speak up

By Tom Coyne
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Three days after news broke about his fake dead girlfriend, Manti Te’o is still mum and Notre Dame has urged the star linebacker to speak up — and soon.

Athletic director Jack Swarbrick said the school has encouraged the Heisman Trophy finalist to talk publicly about a hoax that turned the feel-good story of the college football season into one of the most bizarre in memory.

During the taping of his weekly radio show, posted online Friday, Swarbrick called on Te’o to explain exactly how he was duped into an online relationship with a woman whose “death” was faked by people behind the scam.

S k e p - tics have questioned statements from Te’o and Notre Dame, wondering why the player failed to mention he never met his girlfriend face-to-face, or tell the school about the ruse until Dec. 26 — nearly three weeks after officials say Te’o learned he had been fooled.

Swarbrick believes Te’o ultimately will speak publicly.

“I don’t have any specific knowledge as to how and when, but I can’t fathom a circumstance where it doesn’t (happen). I sort of share everybody’s view that it has to happen,” he said. “We are certainly encouraging it to happen. We think it’s important and we’d like to see it happen sooner rather than later.”

He said that before Deadspin.com broke the news about the hoax in a lengthy report Wednesday, Te’o and his family had planned to go public with the story Monday.

“Sometimes the best laid plans don’t quite work, and this was an example of that. Because the family lost the opportunity in some ways to control the story,” he said.

“It is in the Te’o family’s court. We are very much encouraging them.”

Former NFL coach Tony Dungy, who mentored Michael Vick when he returned to the NFL after doing prison time, had similar advice.

“I don’t know the whole case but I always advise people to face up to it and just talk to people and say what happened,” Dungy said while attending the NCAA convention in Dallas on Friday. “The truth is the best liberator, so that’s what I would do. And he’s going to get questioned a lot about it.”

Te’o led a lightly regarded Fighting Irish team to a 12-0 regular season and the BCS title game, where they were routed 42-14 by Alabama and Te’o played poorly.

He was said to be staying at the IMG Academy in Bradenton, Fla., where he and about 35 other NFL draft hopefuls were invited to work out. He has been projected to be a first-round draft pick in April, possibly among the first 10 picks.

Woods and McIlroy both shoot 75s, miss cut at Abu Dhabi tournament

Wire reports

Tiger Woods and Rory McIlroy missed the cut at the Abu Dhabi Championship on Friday, a woeful start to the season for the world’s top two golfers.

Woods missed it after he was penalized two shots for wrongly taking a free drop, while top-ranked McIlroy was frustrated trying to adjust to his new Nike clubs, even though he used his old Titleist putter in the second round. Both finished with 3-over 75s.

“When you don’t hit fairways on this golf course, you can’t score,” McIlroy said.

Justin Rose played solid, mistake-free golf. Away from the large galleries, the Englishman shot a 69 for a 136 total and a one-shot lead at the halfway point over Jamie Donaldson (70) of Wales, Gonzalo Fernandez-Castano (67) of Spain and Thorbjorn Olesen (69) of Denmark.

Woods and McIlroy were expected to contend for the lead but often looked like weekend golfers. Their struggles captivated the crowds and their departure means it is the first time the world’s top two players missed a cut in the same tournament since McIlroy and Luke Donald at the 2012 U.S. Open. The last time in a regular tour-namment came in 2005 by Woods and Vijay Singh at Disney World.

“I didn’t hit it particularly well. I putted great but just didn’t hit it very good. I was struggling with that,” Woods said. “I have some work to do.”

■ Humana Challenge: James Hahn and Roberto Castro remained atop the Humana Challenge leaderboard Friday, shooting 5-under 67 in the pro-am tournament.

Hahn and Castro were 14 under after another day of perfect conditions in the Coachella Valley.

Phil Mickelson shot a 67 on PGA West’s Jack Nicklaus Private Course.

Sharapova rocks after her victory over Venus

By John Pye
Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — Maria Sharapova leaned back and pumped her arms. She ripped her elbows back and forth, screaming after her victory. Four pumps, five — she rocked forward — six pumps. More.

Sharapova had just defeated Venus Williams 6-1, 6-3 Friday, her first victory over the seven-time major winner in a Grand Slam. This was a match clearly worth celebrating, but it was if Sharapova had won the Australian Open title eight days early.

“I was just really pumped,” she said. “Why shouldn’t I be?”

After back-to-back 6-0, 6-0 wins in the first two rounds — the first time that happened at major since 1985 — Sharapova has conceded the fewest number of games en route to the fourth round at the Australian Open since Steffi Graf did so 24 years ago.

Graf also lost only four games in her first three matches on her way to the second of her three consecutive titles in Melbourne.

Sharapova knows she must stay on top of her game. Another Williams could be waiting. Since Sharapova won the French Open, to complete a career Grand Slam of all four major titles, Serena Williams has won just about everything.

Asked if she was thinking about a showdown with the younger of the Williams sisters, Sharapova said: “She’s on the other side of the draw, and other players are on the other side of the draw as well.”

That means they can meet only in the final.

“Until you get to that stage, and if you do, if you’re facing each other,” she said, “that’s the point when you’re thinking about that particular opponent.”

The top two contenders on the opposite side of the draw, defending champion Victoria Azarenka and Serena Williams, play one after the other at Rod Laver Arena on Saturday. Top-ranked Azarenka is first up against American Jamie Hampton, followed by Williams against Ayumi Morita of Japan.

U.S. Open champion Andy Murray follows them in a third-round match against occasional hitting partner Ricardas Berankis, a qualifier from Lithuania. Four-time Australian Open champion Roger Federer has the night match against Bernard Tomic, the last Aussie in the men’s or women’s draws.

Top-ranked Novak Djokovic took another step closer to a third consecutive Australian title, defeating Radek Stepanek 6-4, 6-3, 7-5 in the third round.

NFL gets offensive with new coaches

■ Seven of eight openings filled with men from that side of ball

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press

Eight head coaching openings, seven hires from the offensive side. Sure looks like a trend.

Scoreboards filled up with points at a record pace in 2012. Defensive gurus scratched their heads trying to deal with read-options and spread attacks. Defensive players had their tongues hanging out trying to keep up with fast-tempo offenses.

So when coaches got fired in Kansas City and San Diego, Jacksonville and Cleveland, Arizona and Chicago, Buffalo and Philadelphia, the rush to sign up brilliant offensive minds looked like J.J. Watt going after quarterbacks. Single-minded and relentless.

"I think what has happened is they have gone to the fact we need to be able to score points to compete," says NFL consultant Gil Brandt, the former Cowboys general manager who keeps close tabs on scoring stats. "Everyone realizes now how important scoring is and that you will not be able to stop people in the league these days."

With rules that favor offenses, especially passing games, and a stronger emphasis on calling pass interference and holding on defensive players, the NFL has become even more of a quarterbacks league. Brandt notes that in last week's divisional playoffs, the average points scored was 69. Teams scoring 28 points would not have won any games; in the 2011 playoffs, 28 points would have won three of the four contests.

"And from 2004-2010, 28 would have won all the divisional round games," Brandt said.

So offense is the flavor of the day.

"The fact of the matter is that points scored win football games, so I think there could be potentially a higher emphasis put on offensive coaches," Arizona's new general manager Steve Keim said. "But as we've seen before, defensive football teams have kept them in contention in the playoffs and that sort of thing. But for the most part, if you can score points, it gives you a chance."

That Andy Reid would get one of the openings was a given, and his move from Philly's cheesesteaks to KC's barbecue was the first this month. Reid is a proven commodity, as his superb record with the Eagles until the last two seasons shows.

Otherwise, the scramble to grab offensive coaches

Marc Trestman

benefited a slew of coordinators or former coordinators.

Bruce Arians, who at 60 and after 20 NFL seasons gets his first shot as the main man, moves to Arizona from Indianapolis. Arians went 9-3 as interim coach while Chuck Pagano underwent treatment for leukemia, and on Friday he finished off the flurry of hirings.

Oregon's Chip Kelly, whose sprinter's-pace offense was all the rage in the college game, replaced Reid in Philadelphia. He was the only choice with no NFL experience.

Another college coach, Syracuse's Doug Marrone, got the job in Buffalo. But Marrone previously worked for the Saints and Jets.

Only Seattle defensive coordinator Gus Bradley got a promotion, taking the Jaguars' job.

Falcons coach Mike Smith, whose own offensive coordinator, Dirk Koetter, withdrew his name from consideration for an opening early in the process, doesn't see specific leanings in the hirings.

"When you become a head coach, you're not an offensive guy, you're not a defensive guy, you're not a special teams guy, you're the head coach," says Smith, who comes from the defensive side of the ball. "You've got to come from a certain background, but the job description is much different as a head coach than you are as an assistant.

"I think you have to have a really good overview. The successful coaches, whether they're from the offensive side or the defensive side, I think are the guys that have an understanding of the entire team."

What they really need is an opportunity. Only Reid has been a head coach in the NFL.

Oh, and they certainly could use a productive quarterback. That's another thing most of these coaches don't have.

Reid must decide whether Matt Cassel and Brady Quinn are his guys after they led Kansas City to a 2-14 record. Unfortunately for Reid and the Chiefs, there are no slam-dunk QB prospects in this year's draft, certainly no Andrew Luck, RG3s or Russell Wilsons.

Gonzalez now another step closer

■ Falcons' tight end hopes to close out his great career in style with Super Bowl

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

FLOWERY BRANCH, Ga. — Tony Gonzalez remembers talking to Michael Strahan after the former New York Giants defensive lineman won a Super Bowl title in his final game.

Talk about going out in style.

"That's the way you want to do it," Gonzalez said Thursday. "That's every athlete's dream. I don't care what sport it is. You'd love to win a championship and leave. That's where I'm at now."

It took him 16 years to finally win a playoff game.

Now, he's two victories away from a Super Bowl championship with the Atlanta Falcons, two wins away from going out the same way Strahan did.

"There's no doubt I could play this game another three years if I wanted to, and at a high level too," the 36-year-old Gonzalez insisted. "But there comes a point in your career where you've gotten everything you ever wanted from this game."

Everything except a ring.

"Really, the only reason I played the last couple of years was for an opportunity like this," Gonzalez said. "Now that it's presented itself, I feel closure coming on. But there's more closure to take care of. It's about winning this week, and winning the Super Bowl."

The top-seeded Falcons (14-3) will host the San Francisco 49ers on Sunday in the NFC championship game, looking to reach the Super Bowl for just the second time in franchise history. Even though Gonzalez has not fully committed to retirement, there's a definite sense in the Atlanta locker room of wanting to give him the ultimate going-away gift.

He's given so much to the game, catching more passes than anyone in NFL history except Jerry Rice. He's given so much to the Falcons over the last four years, working with younger players and setting an example that all were encouraged to follow.

"We know what he's capable of doing on the football field," Falcons coach Mike Smith said. "But Tony is a mentor to so many players in that locker room. He's not a guy of many words, but when he comes to work, he comes to work. We always tell the new guys in the locker room, 'See that guy over there? Mimic what he's doing.'"

Gonzalez's influence has surely rubbed off on players such as receiver Julio Jones, already a Pro Bowler in just his second season. Even Roddy White, who already was one of the NFL's better receivers when Gonzalez was acquired by the Falcons after a dozen seasons in Kansas City, has picked up a thing or two since No. 88 arrived.

"I'd like to think I've helped them with their routine," Gonzalez said. "I'm a big believer in routine. Yeah, you can talk about being great. When young guys come in, I ask them their goals. They all want to be Pro Bowl players. Well, how are you going to get there? You can't just say you're going to work hard. That's so ambiguous."

He'll encourage them to settle on some well-defined goals — say, catching 50 balls before practice, 50 balls during the workout, and 50 balls afterward. Whatever works, make it a habit. And keep looking for ways to make the program even better. Even at his age, Gonzalez still tweaks his regimen if he comes upon something new that might give him an edge.

The 49ers (12-4-1) will have their hands full trying to defend everyone in what Gonzalez calls the PYP offense — Pick Your Poison. But the ageless tight end could be even more of a factor Sunday, facing a defense that doesn't stray far from its base packages and relies heavily on its linebackers in coverage.

As good as they are, Pro Bowlers Patrick Willis and Aldon Smith could have their hands full trying to cover Gonzalez, even if he has lost a step or two.

"He's still playing at a high level for them. He's still making big plays for them," Willis said. "He may not be as fast as he used to be, but he's really crafty and knows how to get open."

For Gonzalez, the idea of working harder than anyone else was instilled at an early age, but the benefits of setting a routine became apparent in his second season with the Chiefs. Facing high expectations after moving into the starting lineup, he dropped 17 passes. He knew something had to change, so he started reading books on other great athletes, from Rice to Michael Jordan.

"When I looked at their routines, I couldn't believe how much work goes into being a great player," Gonzalez said. "I knew if I wanted to be great, this is what I've got to do. I came up with a routine. I started adding to it and changing it a little every year, but it kind of stays the same too. I'm always looking for an advantage."

His methods have sure paid off. Gonzalez has 1,242 receptions and 103 touchdown catches, sixth on the career list. This season, he led the Falcons with 93 receptions for 930 yards and eight touchdowns.

Gonzalez was really at his best last week in the divisional playoff against Seattle. He made a brilliant touchdown catch in the back of the end zone, leaping up to snatch the ball away from a defender like the basketball player he was in college, boxing out for a rebound. He made a couple of other impressive grabs when it looked like he was completely covered.

Finally, after the Falcons squandered a 20-point lead in the fourth quarter and seemed on the verge of handing Gonzalez another playoff loss, he hauled in a 19-yard pass, picking up a few extra yards with a nifty move after the catch, to set up Matt Bryant's winning 49-yard field goal with just 8 seconds remaining.

New Cards coach Arians wants fast, smart team

By Bob Baum
Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz. — After nearly 38 years in the business, at age 60, Bruce Arians finally is an NFL head coach.

And he's made it clear that he's ready to run with it.

Arians was introduced as head coach of the Arizona Cardinals on Friday, promising to build a team that's "smart, disciplined, fast and physical — accountable, no excuses."

The man who went 9-3 as interim coach in Indianapolis after Chuck Pagano left to be treated for leukemia choked up when he talked about his family, saying of his wife "this is our 15th move."

Bruce Arians

And Arians moved quickly, saying he wants a staff assembled by Sunday. He parted ways with popular Cardinals defensive coordinator Ray Horton, who in a matter of hours was named to the same position in Cleveland.

Arians will call the offensive plays himself, although he will bring in someone with the title of offensive coordinator.

He said he proved to himself last year that he can be a successful head coach.

"And it was fun," Arians said. "I got a taste of the blood."

His offense, he said, will be as aggressive as he is. He believes that teams can turn their fortunes around in a hurry.

"I'm a straight shooter," Arians said. "I don't come home with any bullets left in the gun. I think players respect honest and discipline, and we're going to work hard. They're going to be accountable, not to me, to each other. It's not my football team."

"Our players will decide how good they are. It's their football team. If they want to win, we'll win. I'll show them the way. I'm no magic man. I've never tried to be."

"I'll give them the plan, execute the plan with passion and energy and Cardinals will be Cardinals — disciplined, fast, physical football."

He wouldn't confirm reports that Todd Bowles, still under contract with the Philadelphia Eagles, would be his defensive coordinator in Arizona, but he certainly spoke highly of him.

No coaching carousels for Patriots and Ravens

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — Bill Belichick has this nice habit. He coaches in Super Bowls.

John Harbaugh has established an impressive trend, too: winning playoff games.

When they face off Sunday for the second straight year in the AFC championship, Belichick's Patriots and Harbaugh's Ravens will offer further proof of the value of stability.

No coaching carousels in New England and Baltimore.

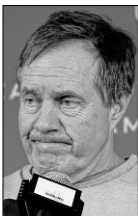

Belichick has been on the job since 2000 and has gone to five Super Bowls, winning the first three. One more trip to the big game and he will tie Don Shula for most Super Bowl coaching assignments.

"He never changes," veteran guard Logan Mankins said. "It's always the same way from him. He coaches the same way. He demands the same things. So, when you have that leader in that role, I think it's easy for everyone else to fall in line."

Harbaugh has managed something Belichick, Shula and every other NFL coach has not: winning in the postseason in each of his first five years on the job. He's also been to seven conference title games, four as an assistant in Philadelphia.

"There's nothing like the playoffs in the National Football League," Harbaugh said. "I've never been in any other sport, so it's hard to compare it to a seven-game series or something like that. But, it would be hard to imagine, for me, a more exciting thing than being in the NFL playoffs and getting to championship games and ultimately the Super Bowl. That's what it's all about. To me, it's the pinnacle of sport."

Bill Belichick

Belichick and Harbaugh have reached the pinnacle in the AFC, which hardly is enough for them. They will remain true to their philosophies and personas as they try to guide their teams to New Orleans.

For Belichick, that means a high level of secrecy, never providing any bulletin board material or any real insight when asked about how the Patriots (13-4) have been so triumphant under him. Belichick flopped in Cleveland in his first stint as a head coach, but his work in New England is the envy of his peers.

Of course, it helped a tiny bit to have Tom Brady on his side.

Brady emphasizes Belichick's steadiness as a key to that success.

"Coach talks about doing your job," Brady said. "Whatever your role may be — third receiver, third running back — you have to perform your role. You know whenever your number is called ... everyone is counting on you. The expectation is you will play at a championship level."

The Patriots have done that for a dozen years; Belichick is third with 18 postseason victories and would tie Shula for second with a win Sunday. He would tie Tom Landry for the top spot by also winning a fourth Super Bowl, which would equal Chuck Noll's four in the big game with the Steelers.

Quite a resume, which also includes three Super Bowls as an assistant. There's a wealth of knowledge there — even if Belichick is unwilling to share it with anyone not wearing Patriots colors.

Advice

Talking about sexual abuse part of healing process

Dear Amy: You have published letters from people in all walks of life and of all ages who have one thing in common — they’ve all been sexually abused.

I’m one of these people. I was abused many years ago by a teen neighbor.

My sister was abused at the same time. It was a “one-time only” event and consisted of what you might call “sexual touching.”

I’ve never discussed this with my sister (or anyone else). We’re about a year apart in age. She’s a year younger than me. This took place more than 50 years ago.

Should I bring up this subject? I don’t even remember the name of the boy who did this, so there’s no going back to the old neighborhood and warning others.

— Older Brother
Dear Brother: You

should talk about this. This incident has been on your mind for more than 50 years, and you need to communicate about it in order to try to understand it and place the abuse in some kind of context.

I can imagine that this is quite bewildering and painful for you. Ideally you should seek out a professional counselor and discuss this in therapy before taking this memory to your sister.

Your sister may have a completely different memory or reaction to this event, and you should have professional guidance as you go through this process.

Male Survivor is an organization committed to helping men and boys heal from sexual abuse. Its helpful website can connect you with other survivors and professionals (malesurvivor.org).

One of the most powerful messages is a very simple one: You are not alone. If you and your sister are able to communicate about this, you will reinforce this message to each other.

Dear Amy: I got engaged about a year ago and couldn’t wait to share the news with my two college friends.

One of them immediately asked, “Am I going to be in your wedding party?” I was so thrown off guard that I immediately responded, “Of course!”

A year later, we are actively planning the wedding, and I know I don’t want her to be involved. She’s in an intense graduate program that won’t end until after the wedding.

Money is tight and her schedule is tighter. Also, she has recently become one of my “small doses” friends. She can be really negative and opinionated, and I really want a stress-free time during the planning period.

All this is made more complicated by the fact that every single time I talk to her she asks if I’ve decided on wedding colors or have picked out bridesmaid dresses. I don’t even know if I want bridesmaids, to be honest.

I’m overwhelmed, but I don’t want to have someone in my wedding just because I couldn’t be honest about my feelings when she asked to participate. How do I tell her?

— Guilty Friend

Dear Friend: Before doing this, realize that you will most likely lose the friendship over this.

You sound prepared to do that, so here’s how you tell her: You start by apologizing and go from there. Don’t make excuses or blame her schedule.

Say, “I am embarrassed and owe you an apology. Even at the time I asked you to be a bridesmaid I knew it was not a good idea for me, and now I am going in another direction.

I was overwhelmed and should not have asked you before thinking it through. I hope you’ll forgive me.”

You’ll have to decide whether to invite her to the wedding as a guest. is insightful. Thank you.

Glass building perfect way to check vehicle lights

Dear Readers: A letter from a reader about the importance of checking vehicle lights by yourself brought some follow-up comments. Here are a few:

■ John in Atlanta says: “If you do not have a second person to inspect the lights, do what I do: Wait until dusk and pull into the parking lot of a glass building (e.g., office building, shopping center, etc.). Use the windows as a mirror to check your lights, turn signals, reverse lights and license-plate lights. Just be careful to keep an eye out for traffic or pedestrians in the parking lot, and be aware of your surroundings.”

■ Frances in Arkansas says: “To test your car lights in 10 seconds, get in your car in the closed garage. Turn the ignition switch to the ‘on’ position, but don’t start the motor. Test the lights to see if the reflection is correct. The taillights will show up on the garage door when you step on the brakes. You do not even need to get out of the car.”

■ C.M. in South Carolina says: “If you choose to pay for full service when gassing up your car, don’t be afraid to ask the service attendant to check the lights along with your oil while filling up. If you’re paying extra for the gas, you might as well get the ‘full’ out of the service.”

These are all good hints to use. Thanks!

— Heloise

Dear Heloise: I have a tiny laundry room, not large enough for a stand-up trash can.

To save time disposing of dryer lint, I keep a small, decorative canvas basket on the shelf above the dryer. Any type of recycled container will work great!

Saves time and those extra steps of disposing of the lint in another room. Love your column and the very useful hints from you and readers — double thanks!

CA 19-9 blood test may cause more worry than it’s worth

Dear Dr. Roach: I am 51 years old. My sister, at age 53, had a non-cancerous tumor removed from her pancreas. I got a CA 19-9 blood test last year, which was 55, and this year, it is 52.

I had an MRI, and everything is fine. I am not sure if I should do more testing to make sure everything is still OK or wait and see next year.

— C.S.W.

Dear C.S.W.: CA 19-9 is a substance secreted by some, but not all, pancreatic cancers.

It is most useful in people who have had a diagnosis of pancreatic cancer. If the level is high, it can be followed as a guide to the amount of tumor in the body and to determine if therapy is effective.

However, it is not very useful as a screening test for pancreatic cancer, because some people have detectable levels for no clear reason. In one study of 71,000 healthy people without symptoms, about 1,000 had a level above 37 — and only four of those people had pancreatic cancer.

Unless you have some other reason to get this test done you haven’t told me about, I would not recommend getting the test. It causes more worry than it’s worth.

Dear Dr. Roach: Can you please address Moyamoya disease? My husband’s cousin was recently diagnosed with it following a stroke and is undergoing surgery. We heard that there may be a genetic component to the disease through the mother. Is this true? What are the cousin’s chances for a full recovery?

— K.O’C.

Dear K.O’C.: Moyamoya disease, despite its odd-sounding name (Japanese for “puff of smoke”), is a serious disease involving blockages of the major blood vessels in the base of the brain, called the circle of Willis.

It is most prevalent in Japan but is rarely found in this country. Only about 10 percent of Moyamoya is familial, and the genetics are not related to gender, even though the condition is a bit more common in women.

Surgical treatment for this condition is designed to increase blood flow to the affected part of the brain.

In expert hands, the results can be very good. This is one of the conditions for which it pays to consult with the person with the greatest experience you can find.

Horoscope

TODAY’S BIRTHDAY (Jan. 19). The Buddha suggested that desire was the same from all spheres. Whether what you want is physical, emotional or spiritual, you go after it in the same way this year -- with all your heart. Seek strong allies. In February, you’ll push the mundane into an art form. A loving soul joins you for adventure in May. Pisces and Sagittarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 4, 10, 28, 1 and 29.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). The standard you uphold is just out of reach. Don’t compromise though. You will attain the high level you desire, but only if you keep the bar where it is.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). In children’s books, stars can be small, peaches can be giant and animals can talk. Matters of real life scale and communication may seem similarly whimsical to you today.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). What if your path is not a path at all? You are already at the destination and all the walking and wandering is merely a movement that keeps you engaged in all aspects of this wonderful location.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Life gets cumbersome for those who are constantly adding to their collections. Go the other way. Constantly simplify. The lighter side of life is divine.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). It’s as though your heart has a volume knob and you can turn up the love whenever the situation calls for it. And the situation always calls for it — love is truly what the world needs now.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). A dream that depends on specific people is far less likely to come true than a dream that is broader in scope. Imagine yourself as both the dreamer and the dream.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). The wild cards life throws at you teach you versatility. Stay light on your feet. Roll and swerve with life’s momentum. What you’re doing now is an elegant dance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Your own thoughts can cause a kind of self-hypnosis if you let them go unchecked. So check them. Otherwise the false ideas could collude against you, mesmerizing you into inaction. Wake up!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You don’t need better technology to reach people. Connections aren’t made with wires or cell phone towers, they are made with heart strings. You move people because you care.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Maybe you’re less in demand. Instead of being discouraged by this, take the break. It will feel wonderful to have the pressure off of you for a change so you can relax.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You’re starting to realize that what you say really matters to people. And with the Sun and Mercury (communication) in your sign, it matters even more in the weeks to come.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Maybe you didn’t realize how much you really wanted to change someone, but it will be liberating to realize that it’s not your job. Once you give up the struggle, you’ll be surprised at a wonderful turn in this relationship.

Jesus plays many roles as he watches over mankind

We know that our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ had no beginning and will have no end.

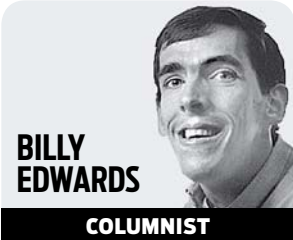

He was there at the beginning when the world was first brought into existence, and we know that He will be there at the end of time, as we know it, when God brings forth the new earth and heavens.

There are many people who have the mistaken notion that just because Jesus was born of the Virgin Mary in the little town of Bethlehem of Judah, that this was the start of His existence, but it wasn't.

The birth of the Lord Jesus Christ through the Virgin Mary marks His entrance into the world in the form of a human man.

People sometimes will ask the question concerning how Jesus Christ can be God and at the same time be man. It seems to be a contradiction in terms. It seems to be a contradiction in the realities of existences, if you will.

It boggles the mind just to try to entertain the thought of just how a holy, pure and righteous God could wrap Himself in human flesh and be born into this sinful and dark world. How can this thing be?

If all the brightest men of all time could somehow come together for one huge brainstorming session, they could never devise a plan as ingenious as the one God had in mind to redeem the fallen souls of all mankind.

Why is this? It was because it had to fit all mankind across all ages. It also had to fit within God's perfect law of justice and holiness.

Even before He created man, and eons before He created the world, He knew the man that He would come to love and would delight in with so much joy would turn his back on Him and sink into the depths of sin.

From the beginning, our Lord has been a part of mankind.

He had His hand in the affairs of human events from the opening words of Genesis all the way to the very end of the book of Revelation. We recognize this in the themes of every book of the Bible.

I am going to do my best to list the theme and the book without elaborating. Anyone who knows me will know how hard this will be, but I'm going to try! Maybe sometime in the future we can go back and talk about them individually.

In Genesis, He is portrayed as the creator God. In Exodus, He is the redeemer. In Leviticus, He is our sanctification. In Numbers, He is our guide. In Deuteronomy, He is our teacher. In Joshua, He is the Captain of the Lord's host. In Judges, He gives victory over your enemies.

In I Samuel, He is the root of Jesse. In II Samuel, He is the Son of David. In I and II Kings, He is the king and the Lord of lords. In I Chronicles, He is our intercessor. In II Chronicles, He is our High Priest. In Ezra, He is our temple; our house of worship. In Nehemiah, He is our mighty wall of protection. In Esther, He stands in the gap to deliver us from our enemies.

In Job, He is the arbitrator, who not only understands our struggles, but has the power to do something about them. In Psalms, He is our song and our reason to sing.

In Proverbs, He is our wisdom, helping us to make sense out of life and to live it successfully. In Ecclesiastes, He is our purpose, delivering us from vanity. In the Song of Solomon, He is our love, our rose of Sharon.

In Isaiah, He is our mighty Counselor, our Prince of Peace, the everlasting Father and more. He is everything we need! In Jeremiah, He is our balm of Gilead, the soothing slave for our sin-sick soul.

In Lamentations, He is the ever-faithful one upon whom we can depend. In Ezekiel, He is our wheel in the middle of a wheel — the one who assures that dry, dead bones will come alive again. In Daniel, He is the ancient of days, the everlasting God who never runs out of time.

In Joel, He is our refuge, keeping us safe in the time of trouble. In Amos, He is the shepherd that we can depend on to stay by our side. In Obadiah, He is the Lord of the Kingdom. In Jonah, He is our salvation, bringing us back into His will.

In Micah, He is the judge of the nation. In Nahum, He is the jealous God. In Habakkuk, He is the Holy One. In Zephaniah, He is the witness. In Haggai, He overthrows the enemies. In Zechariah, He is the Lord of Hosts. In Malachi, He is the Lord who doesn't change.

In Matthew, He is the King of the Jews. In Mark, He is the servant. In Luke, He is the Son of Man, feeling what we feel. In John, He is the Son of God. In Acts, He is the Savior of the world. In Romans, He is the righteousness of God. In I Corinthians, He is the rock that followed Israel. In II Corinthians, He is the triumphant one, giving victory. In Galatians, He is the liberator who sets us free.

In Ephesians, He is the head of the Church. In Philippians, He is our joy. In Colossians, He is our completeness.

In I Thessalonians, He is our hope. In II Thessalonians, He is our redemption. In I Timothy, He is our faith. In II Timothy, He is our stability.

In Titus, He is our Savior. In Philemon, He is our benefactor. In Hebrews, He is our perfection. In I Peter, He is our example. In II Peter, He is our purity.

In I John, He is our life. In II John, He is our pattern. In III John, He is our motivation. In Jude, He is the foundation of our faith. In Revelation, He is our coming King.

Until next week — God bless.

"Opportunity To Begin Again"

To some people life seems like a dead-end street going no-where. Moses may have been feeling a little like that when God appeared to him in the Burning Bush.

Allow me to highlight the situation Moses was in. At the time, Moses was eighty years old, and probably resolved to settle down in a family setting that required very little use of the brilliant mind he possessed, not to mention the multiple leadership qualities, mostof which were laying dormant.

Forty years earlier Moses had tried to identify with the Hebrew people, but had not only been rejected, but was forced to flee from Egypt as a wanted man. Now, in the remote desert he had brooded over those failures for four decades. Sounds hopeless until we read his story and learn how suddenly God intervened and sent Moses on the adventure of his life.

Admittedly the experiences of Moses stand in a category all its own, but his story teaches us that God does have a plan for our life, and has equipped us with the talents and ability to accomplish our God given purpose.

The fact is, God loves us and wants us just as we are; yet He sees in each of us, not only what we are, but what we can become when we make a personal commitment to follow Him through life.

The true measure of value is not one's prominence, superiority or popularity, but one's faith in God. The life of Moses is now history, but each of us are living with tremendous opportunities for making a difference in our world.

May God guide you on your journey of faith.

God not just done with us when we retire

Dear Dr. Graham: I'm concerned about my husband. He retired about a year ago and just seems to have lost his zest for living. Some days, he hardly bothers to get out of bed, no matter how much I get after him. What's wrong with him?

— Mrs. D. McL.

Dear Mrs. D. McL: I'm not a psychologist or doctor, of course, but from what you say, I suspect your husband is depressed because he no longer feels he has any reason for living.

For many years, he felt useful, and his work gave significance and purpose to his life. But now his work days are over, and he apparently has nothing to take their place.

Unfortunately, many retired people experience this — particularly men, I've found. At first, all they can think about is not having to get up in the morning and do the same things they've been doing for years.

After a few months, however, reality sets in and they feel bored and at loose ends. They may even think they've prepared for retirement by having a good financial plan, but they haven't thought through what they'll do with their time.

But listen: God isn't finished with us when we retire! Don't nag your husband; it may only make things worse.

Do encourage him to seek God's will for the rest of his life, and to get involved in some worthwhile activities. For example, most community service organizations need volunteers, as do most churches. The Bible tells us to "Carry each other's burdens" (Galatians 6:2).

May you and your husband also use these retirement years as an opportunity to grow closer to Jesus Christ.

If your church has a Bible study for men, for example, encourage your husband to get involved. The Bible says, "But grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ" (2 Peter 3:18).

State AG balks at bill aimed at Vanderbilt student groups

The Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The state attorney general's office says a vetoed bill that took aim at Vanderbilt University's treatment of religious student groups is "constitutionally suspect."

The proposal was the result of a controversy that flared up after a gay Vanderbilt student was thrown out of a Christian fraternity. That caused the school to begin more strictly enforcing its "all-comers" policy.

Vanderbilt's policy requires its student groups to allow any student to become a member and hold office, regardless of the student's beliefs.

Christian groups have protested the policy, which essentially forces them to allow gay members, and at least two groups have ended their affiliation with the university because of the policy.

The bill would have given religious student groups the right to allow only those sharing their beliefs to become members and leaders.

The bill was passed by the General Assembly in May but vetoed by Gov. Bill Haslam.

EVANSVILLE — With a big smile, a slight blush and a few tears, the Rev. Bernard Etienne of Evansville's Holy Rosary Parish accepted a national award this week for his contribution to Catholic education.

"There was a time in my life that this sort of event would have been something I aspired to," Etienne told the students and teachers at Holy Rosary Catholic School, who had crowded into the school's gymnasium to celebrate his achievement.

"But, by the grace of God, at this point in my life I understand that these kind of events only happen by the grace of God," he said. "It's not about me."

Etienne is the second Evansville pastor to receive the National Catholic Education Association's Distinguished Pastor Award.

The Rev. Gregory Chamberlin received it in 2011.

The award, established in 2007, is bestowed on 12 pastors each year who work closely with students and teachers at their parish schools to provide spiritual guidance.

This week, Holy Rosary teachers and students alike said Etienne more than deserves the honor.

"He's a father figure when he needs to be a father figure, a brother when he needs to be a brother," said Holy Rosary Principal Joan Fredrich. He's there for students in moments of crisis, celebration and daily life, she added.

And his sermons are always funny.

"It's serious thing we do, but that doesn't mean we have to be serious all the time," Etienne said. "Even Jesus laughed a bit."

What's more, his homilies usually include some kind of story from his own childhood, said 14-year-old Elise Milligan. The younger kids, especially, appreciate that, she added.

But while the teachers, students and fellow clergymen

Today in history

The Associated Press

Today is Saturday, Jan. 19, the 19th day of 2013. There are 346 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 19, 1953, CBS-TV aired the widely watched episode of "I Love Lucy" in which Lucy Ricardo, played by Lucille Ball, gave birth to Little Ricky. (By coincidence, Ball gave birth the same day to her son, Desi Arnaz Jr.)

On this date:

In 1937, millionaire Howard Hughes set a transcontinental air record by flying his monoplane from Los Angeles to Newark, N.J., in 7 hours, 28 minutes and 25 seconds.

In 1955, a presidential news conference was filmed for television for the first time, with the permission of President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

In 1977, in one of his last acts of office, President Gerald R. Ford pardoned Iva Toguri D'Aquino, an American convicted of treason for making wartime broadcasts for Japan.

Ten years ago: President Fidel Castro and millions of other Cubans voted in parliamentary elections where all 609 candidates ran uncontested.

Five years ago: Republican John McCain won a hard-fought South Carolina primary; Democrats Hillary Rodham Clinton and Barack Obama split the spoils in the Nevada caucuses. Death claimed actress Suzanne Pleshette in Los Angeles at age 70; John Stewart, a former member of the Kingston Trio, in San Diego at age 68; and former Chicago Mayor Eugene Sawyer at age 73.

One year ago: Six U.S. Marines were killed in a helicopter crash in southern Afghanistan. One of the world's most popular file-sharing sites, Megaupload.com, was shut down as its founder and several company officials were accused of facilitating millions of illegal downloads of films, music and other content. Rupert Murdoch's media empire apologized and agreed to cash payouts to 37 people who'd been harassed by its tabloid press.
